THE second Part of the Art of Singing is composed of the Christian Harmony in two volumes. The first volume is here completed. It presents to worshipping assemblies a variety of tunes adapted to solemn and social praise. To Singing Schools, it presents an assortment of music proper for practice; as soon as they have attended to the rules and lessons comprised in the Musical Primer. In the meantime, purchasers may procure this volume and the Primer separately; or they may have them both bound together;—or lastly, those who are already acquainted with Music, may if they choose, take this volume to the exclusion of the Primer, and avoid the expense of repurchasing the rules, the A B C of their art.

DESCRIPTION OF THE WHOLE WORK.

TO publish the Art of Singing and bring it to a final close, will require considerable time. In the meanwhile the friends of music will be inquisitive to know what they are to expect from the whole work, in its final completion. And in order to convey the most satisfactory information relative to this inquiry, I have ventured to anticipate the appearance of those divisions of the work which are not yet published : and, in the course of the following description, have drawn the whole production and its several parts into actual view.

The Art of Singing will consist of three leading parts, the Musical Primer, the Christian Harmony, and the Musical Magazine. The second part, or the Christian Harmony will be further divided into two vols. and the third part, or Magazine, into a course of numbers. At their first appearance, all the different divisions of the work will be published separately : but in preparing them for the press, the unity of the main work will be steadily pursued : so that in the end, the several parts and divisions may all be collected into a single book, and form one consistent whole. The work, thus completed, is designed to furnish an assortment of music large enough for the generality of singers to possess. It is in short, to comprise the elements, or rules of the science, together with a regular gradation of the best sacred music, from the plainest tunes up to the nicest airs and anthems.

The rules will be mostly contained in the first part of the Art of Singing, or the Musical Primer : and indeed the prime object of the Primer will be, to furnish and assist singing schools and all learners during the first stages of their improvement. Hence the tunes that are introduced into the Primer, are principally of a kind, the most simple, plain and easy : calculated, not to entertain the skilful performer, who is delighted with nothing short of refined and delicate airs, but to take the bewildered learner and conduct him forward along a smooth and gradual ascent towards the summit of improvement. As soon however as learners have paid sufficient attention to the rules and tunes in the Primer, and are in want of other music, they may find a supply in the 1 vol. of the Christian Harmony. Indeed it is a part of the original plan, that such volume should be expressly calculated for use next after the Musical Primer : for it is the Christian Harmony in 2 vols. that is to compose the second part of the Art of Singing.

The first volume is already complete. The music, which it contains, forms a considerable variety, not of long pieces, but of short tunes : not of nice and complicated performance, but in general, rather plain, and in very few instances, difficult to be learnt. To a large proportion of music of this description, preference has been given, and the tunes themselves have been suited to an uncommonly great variety of metres, on purpose that the book might the better be calculated for answering two very important objects. Firstly, that it might be suitable for singing-schools and all learners immediately after having used the Musical Primer, and secondly, that it might be rendered extensively serviceable to all christian Churches in the solemn exercises of humble and devotional praise.

As soon as time and circumstances will permit, the plan of the Art of Singing will be yet further advanced by the completion of the second volume of the Christian Harmony : And that Book, when published, will not be confined to psalm and hymn tunes, but will comprise a considerable number of set pieces and anthems. Hence it will be suitable for all those singers whose skill in performance rises above the level of plain tune singing.

The third part of the Art of Singing will furnish a still further variety of favorite pieces. This part is to be formed by the Musical Magazine in numbers ; and these numbers are designed to comprise some of the most elegant and refined compositions, European and American. Of course, the Magazine will accommodate the curious, who wish for a variety of music ; Nor, in the meanwhile, will it fail to accommodate the generality of singers ; for any particular number of the Magazine may be purchased separately, and amongst them a'l. select companies of singers will be able to find suitable pieces for all ordinary occasions of public solemnity, such as thanksgivings, and fasts, ordinations and elections, commencements, days of public rejoicings and the like.

Such then is the anticipated view of the work entitled the Art of Singing. As a whole, it may be all collected together, when it will form a regular and a considerable assortment of music. Contemplated in its several divisions, it may serve to accommodate every possible description of purchasers. For, firstly, they may have some parts of the work without the rest ; or secondly, they may have all the divisions separately ; or thirdly, as soon as the publication is closed, they may, if they desire it, have the whole work bound in one large and elegant volume.

M I S C E L L A N E O U S R E M A R K S .

WHENEVER tunes are performed only in two parts, they should be sung in the bass and the air, or song part ; and in such cases, the air may be sung either in tenor or treble voices, or in both of them united.

The tune called, Birkley, may be sung as a long metre, by repeating the tune in the two last lines of every second verse.

Carolina may also be sung as a long metre by repeating the three last lines of the tune in the two last lines of every second verse.

Chapel may be sung as a common metre, by repeating the first line of the verse in the second line of the tune ; and the third line of the verse in the fifth line of the tune.
